Hi friend,

A lot of people I talk to feel stuck between two options:
Buy a home completely alone...or rent forever.

But what if there were more options in between?

For many people, co-buying creates a version of homeownership that feels more accessible, flexible, and realistic.

And no, it doesn't have to mean communal living or sharing every part of your life.

Sometimes it simply looks like:

friends buying a duplex, siblings buying a second home, or two people creating more possibilities together than they could alone.

That's a huge reason I care so much about this conversation.

Not because co-buying is “perfect,” but because more people deserve to understand that homeownership doesn't only have to happen one traditional way.

Inside the Joynt platform, we help walk you through the co-buying process step-by-step... from running numbers and organizing conversations to creating a shared game plan with the people you may want to buy with.
